Haryana is a jewel in the crown of the country India, sharing its capital Chandigarh with the state of Punjab. The Shivalik hills borders the state in the north-east and the Aravalli range towards the south and the commonly spoken language of the natives in this state is Haryanai. Haryana has a number of sites which dates back to the ancient civilizations of the Vedic era. The state also has the history of being the battleground for the Indian epic Mahabharata and also for the well known Panipat battle. The salubrious climate of the state, studded with the presence of a large number of old forts, monuments, temples and gardens act as a captivating factor which attracts a large number of tourists to this state, both from within the country and from outside. There are a large number of dry, thorny and deciduous forests which are situated at a large number of places all over the state of Haryana. The state turns into a grass carpet when the monsoons hit the state. However, the intensity of rainfall varies at the various locations of this state. The regions of Brahma Sarovar and Sannihit Sarovar act as a major attraction in this region.

1. Rann of Kutch

Different places to visit in Gujarat

Wedged between the Arabian Sea and the boundless Thar Desert, Rann of Kutch is mesmerizing symphony of salt and sand. This white symphony reaches its crescendo on a full moon night. What makes Kutch even more surreal is that during the monsoon, it gets submerged in the water. For the remaining eight months of the year, it's a gigantic stretch of white salt lending it the look of white desert. During full moon nights cultural programs celebrating Gujarat's rich culture and traditions are usually held at Dhordo. A moon light camel safari is the Rann of a Kutch is one of the must to do things.
